SUPREME COURT.

Abstracts of Opinions Rendered Saturday, September 26, 1885.

STATES-APPEAL.

11,881. William A. Rinehart et al. vs. Benjamin F. Vall. Reversed. C. C. Appeal dismissed.
Mitchell, C. J.

In an appeal by parties other than the administrator from a judgment on a petition to sell a decedent's real estate, an appeal bond must be filed within thirty days from the date of the decision, and the transcript must be filed within thirty days from the date of the filing of the bond.
Unless for good cause shown the Supreme Court will not grant a writ of certiorari to review the filing of a bond within one year. (2,442; 43 Revised Statutes.)

PERJURY—INDICTMENT.

12,295. The State of Indiana vs. George W.
Anderson. Reversed. C. C. Appeal dismissed.
Zeller, J.

An indictment need not be in the exact words of the statute, but other words conveying the same meaning may be used. Where, in an indictment for perjury, the indictment averred that the defendant made a false affidavit to procure a continuance, and that it was done feloniously, this was equivalent to the word falsely, as used in the statute. In a prosecution for perjury in swearing to an affidavit to procure a continuance it must appear by a specific averment, or by the statement of the facts in the indictment, that the swearing was touching matters material to the point in question. (2 Ind., 169; Bishop on Crim. Pro. 24.)

MURDER—INDICTMENT—EVIDENCE.

12,485. James M. Dennis vs. The State. Montgomery, C. J. Reversed. How.

In an indictment for murder charging that the killing was done with a club, "by striking, bruiseing and torturing," etc., it is not necessary that it be charged that the defendant held the club in his hands. It is not necessary in such an indictment to charge the defendant in formal and express terms with the commission of an assault or an assault and battery on the deceased.
(22 Ind., 1; 36 Ind., 381-386; 2 Ind., 299.) The question of permitting the filing of a supplemental indictment for a new trial is one which is addressable to the sound discretion of the trial court.
In case of a felony, where the life or liberty of the defendant is involved, it would be an absolute abuse of such discretion to refuse to entertain a supplemental motion for a new trial founded on materially false and untrue testimony.

The appellant was convicted on the evidence of one "officer" of the murder, and when taken before the coroner solemnly declared under oath that he himself committed the murder, and no one was present or assisted him.
Afterward being told that he did not commit the crime alone, and being pressed to give the name of his accomplice, although he had sworn before that he had none, he connected appellant with the crime. Under the circumstances, and on his evidence appellant was convicted. After the conviction of appellant, then gave another version of the murder, in which five persons were present at the murder, and in effect that appellant had nothing to do with it. The evidence of Coffey's last confession is something more than impeaching evidence and is not exclusive in its proper sense of the term. By his third confession Coffey says in substance that he had perjured himself in his other two previous confessions and in his testimony in the trial of this case. The Supreme Court will not permit the appellant, who has been convicted on concessedly false and untrue testimony, to suffer the extreme penalty of death.

CONTRACTS—STATUTE OF FRAUDS.

12,005. Francis H. W. vs. William Fleming.
Allen, S. C. Reversed. Elliott, J.

A contract wherein the assignee of a leasehold agrees as part of the consideration of the sale and transfer of that interest to pay to the owner of the leasehold the fee is not within the statute of frauds. (2 Ind., 215; 7 Ind., 271; 7 Ind., 215; 4 Ind., 312; 2 Demo., 4.)

The Enforcement of Laws.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:
The position of your paper upon the duty of public officers to enforce the laws is so well grounded in common sense and has been so well justified by argument that it seems almost a waste of time to add anything to what has been said; but there are some true cases that will illustrate the position of The News that it may not be amiss to refer to them. A prosecuting attorney in Kansas concluded that a state of that State was unreasonable and impossible to enforce the law, and he proceeded against a breach of duty and removed from office. The opinion of the Supreme Court of Kansas will be found in the case of The State vs. Foster, 21 Kansas Rep. 14. It administers a sound rebuke to officers who disobey the law they are sworn to enforce, and declares it is their sacred duty to enforce the law without inquiring whether it is politic or not. The prosecuting attorney who lost his office subsequently applied to the Federal Court for assistance, but found no comfort there. The Central Law Journal, a leading law periodical of the country, in commenting upon these cases, said of public officers: "They have nothing to do with the policy of the law, it is their sacred duty to enforce it. A man who takes office and who consequently takes an official oath to uphold the law, having at the same time in his heart the purpose to prevent their enforcement, is morally a perjured." To what Judge Thompson, the editor of the Central Law Journal, has said may be added that such an officer is a traitor at heart, for he tramples on the expressed will of the majority, and an anarchist, for so far as is in his power, he overthrows law and order. Is a man who, while in office, justly subjected himself to the contempt of the people, and can any good citizen approve his conduct by voting for him for the highest office of the municipality?
This is why I wish to remark.

LAW AND ORDER.

The Instruction on Postal Cards.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:
The legend you suggest is just as erroneous as the one criticized by the Herald. "Only the address is to be on this side" is awkward and incomplete. It is not a sentence. It has neither subject nor predicate. The use of grammar require words to be so arranged as to intelligibly convey the meaning desired to be conveyed, and in the case of the use of the postal card the best speakers of our language. The instruction is placed on the postal card for the purpose of giving advice or direction to the person using the card. A subject and predicate are therefore necessary; otherwise the full intent and meaning do not appear. If the imperative mode is used here, it brings out the significance clearly and distinctly. I would suggest, "Write only the address on this side." MCKINLEY.

Wanted—Know.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News:
It would interest many of our Irish fellow-citizens to know if the noted absence of Mr. Thomas Cottrill, democratic candidate for mayor, from the recent Irish meeting at Masonic Hall, and the meagerness of his showing to the Irish from ($1) are due to his shunning with his English-Welsh kindred beyond the ocean in their time-nursed hatred of Ireland and the Irish.

They Probably Did.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News: Please inform a few inquiring democrats if the Indianapolis saloon-keepers did not bolt the democratic nomination for mayor a few years back when Professor Stuart was defeated by Mr.
Cottrill, through their alleged support joined to the bumper element in the republican party?
